

Question 5

Certain criteria must be satisfied if a measurement or observation is to be believed. Will the criteria necessarily be as strict for an expected result as for an unexpected result?

Solution

Not necessarily because people tend to accept what they expect to see.