

Question Q1.10

What are the units of volume? Suppose another student tells you that a cylinder of radius r and height h has volume given by $\pi r^3 h$. Explain why this cannot be right.

Solution

The units of volume are length^3 . The problem with $\pi r^3 h$ is that it has units of length^4 .